

SPARKS' PERSPECTIVE

Ron Sparks Commissioner

As you read this, I will just be returning from attending the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture's meeting in Washington, DC. This meeting was particularly important because the 2007 Farm Bill continues to be discussed. There have been forums and hearings all over the U.S., but at this NASDA meeting all of the Agriculture Commissioners and Directors have the opportunity to gather together to discuss and debate the issues that we feel are most important to our farmers back at home.

My greatest concern about the 2007 Farm Bill is that it will not protect our farmers as well as it could and that it must ensure profitability. My first question is: how do you write a Farm Bill without the WTO and DOHA trade agreement talks being complete? And then we must ask: what are we giving away? As we have seen in the last few weeks, trade agreements with countries like Japan and Mexico have hurt our farmers tremendously because they focus only on making restrictions on our exports without considering the repercussions to our farmers and producers.

Our country produces some of the highest quality, best tasting, and safest agricultural products on the market, yet we cater to other countries who tell us to add restrictions or they won't buy. I believe that sometimes trade comes down to politics. Although I know that politics is part of every society, I don't believe that the future of our farmers should be reduced to being a pawn in the game of international trade.

I hope that over the next few years we can work together to create a better environment for farmers to do business. Right now, we are losing young farmers. The perception seems to be that if you go into farming, you might end up barely getting by from year to year. Too many times that is the reality for Alabama farmers, especially after the last two hurricane seasons. I think we can help change that. We can and should create a safety net for farmers through subsidies and disaster relief programs.

While at the NASDA meeting in Washington, we also talked about alternative fuels and child nutrition programs. There are so many important issues concerning today's farmer in Alabama and we are working to find ways to help you.

TRADE MISSION TO INDIA

Srinivas "Java" Javangula, left, visits with Vijay Prasad of Cremica Ltd. about the possibility of sourcing various products during the Hospitality World Trade show in Mumbai, India.

Commissioner Ron Sparks sent Assistant Director of International Trade John Key and International Trade Specialist Srinivas "Java" Javangula, to India in February to promote value added food products and pecans from Alabama in India. The Department also acted as the state's liaison through the Southern United States Trade Association for USDA's Emerging Markets Program and participated in two trade events - IFOWS 06, in New Delhi (an event for the retail industry) and the Hospitality World 2006, in Mumbai (an event for the hospitality, restaurant and institution industry). These events were followed by cooking demonstrations, a tasting event, a culinary contest with budding chefs, a press conference, market visits and an assessment of opportunities in the pet food industry.

"This is the beginning of the Department's focus on trade with India," said Commissioner Sparks. "I believe that India, with its population of 1.08 billion people, provides a tremendous opportunity for Alabama companies."

IFOWS 06 promotion was a tremendous success. Products from 24 southern US companies, 12 from Alabama, were featured. The importers were very interested in the products and expressed their willingness to import them. Pecan cake and jambalaya were prepared in a cooking demonstration and tasting event by Ms. Vaishali Sood, SUSTA's brand ambassador. The event was an instant success.

A culinary contest with 22 budding chefs from Banarsidas

Chandiwala Institute of Hotel Management and Catering Technology was held in New Delhi. These promising culinary professionals used products from the southern US to prepare a full course meal. The chefs displayed their skills and creative talent in a truly competitive environment.

The response from the institutional buyers was overwhelming at Hospitality World 2006, in Mumbai. A relationship was established with "Cremica Group" which showed interest in procuring condiments that could be further processed and

Alabama Gleaning Network

The Alabama Gleaning Network of the Society of St. Andrew (SoSA) will receive a new grant from the ALFA Foundation for $20,000 to expand gleaning throughout the state. In January 2005, SoSA opened a regional office in Birmingham to coordinate the Alabama Gleaning Network. This venture was funded in part by a $20,000 grant received from the Alfa Foundation in 2004. This grant proved of great assistance in establishing the SoSA office. The renewal will enable the Alabama Gleaning Network to feed even more hungry people!

Since 2001 SoSA has worked with Alabama farmers who generously donate crops that they cannot sell for a variety of reasons, including storm damage, overproduction, and because the appearance may not meet market standards due to size, shape and/or blemishes. Shelby County farmer Joe Smith says, "The Alabama Gleaning Network enables farmers to help those in need, and also helps farmers to keep their hard work from going to waste and their produce from spoiling." Over 1,700 volunteers helped to glean and distribute nearly 600,000 pounds of produce for distribution to over 140 agencies across the state. The Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries has offered to help the SoSA with its increasing success by providing storage space at the State Farmer's Market sheds in Montgomery. "They have accomplished so much in a short period of time," said Commissioner Sparks. "We appreciate their hard work for the people in need across the state and are extremely proud to be a small part of their efforts."

In 2005, one gleaning project included a group of young people living in low-income housing who traveled to the Chilton Area Horticulture Substation. These children and youth picked peaches to take home to their families as well as low-income senior citizens. This was an educational experience as well as a service opportunity. Having never visited a farm before, many of these children enjoyed the opportunity to pick and eat fresh peaches.

Sparks Urges Use of Biodiesel

Commissioner Ron Sparks is encouraged by the increased attention on alternative fuels in recent months. The idea of fuels derived from sources other than oil is not new to those in the agriculture industry. In fact, the Department has been involved with the testing and production of alternative fuels for many years. As the Birmingham Airport Authority prepares to use biodiesel produced at the Alabama Biodiesel Plant in Moundville in all of its diesel powered vehicles and machinery, Sparks hopes that others will follow their lead.

"I think it is extremely important to develop alternative fuels that will make us less dependent on foreign oil, but getting machinery that can produce biodiesel in mass quantities can be expensive," said Sparks. "That's why the Department of Agriculture & Industries helped provide a grant to initiate production at the Moundville plant. We also want people to know that you can make biodiesel without all the big equipment."

According to the National Biodiesel Board, biodiesel can be used in any diesel engine and tests have shown that it has a less harmful environmental impact than fuels produced from crude oil. Recycling vegetable oil is good for the environment and lessens the United States' dependence on other countries for fuel. It can also save consumers a lot of money. The tools needed to make biodiesel in small amounts include a large supply of fryer oil, a portable tank, a siphon, and knowledge of safety precautions necessary when working with chemicals. The process of combining the oil and chemicals to produce fuel can take under an hour and the cost is no longer prohibitive.

"We commend anyone who wants to try to produce biodiesel for their own personal use," said Richard Campo, Vice President of the Alabama Biodiesel Plant. "Just remember, commercially we need to follow the American Society for Testing and Materials D6751 Standard and the engine manufacturer's recommendations. However, individuals that make it on their own and cannot do consumed in the local market. While in Mumbai, Key & Javangula also met with "Reliance Industries Limited" promoting southern US products. The company is entering the Indian retail sector in an unprecedented way.

Pecans are not grown or available in India. "Power Pecan - the nutritionally powerful nut" is the mantra used to create awareness of the uses and the versatility of pecans. The press conference at Hyderabad was primarily to promote, create awareness and develop brand recognition for "pecans", the power pecan. Nuts & Spices, a leading retail outlet in Chennai that exclusively sells dry fruits and spices were enthusiastic to include pecans in their product offering during their meeting.

Pet food in India is still emerging as a requested product. While in Chennai, Key & Javangula met with a leading pet food industry analyst and several veterinarians to establish a relationship. The veterinarians were very receptive to the products and confirmed that there is a slow but positive shift by the pet owners to feed their dogs and cats processed food instead of table scraps.

The Department looks forward to expanding on contacts made during this initial visit to India. If you are interested in having your products promoted by the Department, please call the International Trade office at 334/240-7245.

all those tests need to be aware that fuel that does not meet those standards may cause their warranty to not be upheld. By producing biodiesel, we hope to reduce our dependence on foreign oil and also help farmers
